WALLACE R. FARRINGTON, EDITOR.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1895.

AFTER the expert liars get through telling stories about Hawaii and its rebellion, in American papers, some newspaperman can make a new and interesting story on the truth of the incidents that have been so thoroughly distorted.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND says Liliuokalani has been duped and he never sent her a present that he knows of. The mystery now is just what position Mrs. Dominis does hold in Mr. Cleveland's heart of hearts. His statement in connection with the diary entry would seem to indicate that they are not even on friendly terms.

INVESTIGATE PROPERLY.

While we do not question the honesty of purpose of the committees spending their time comparing the Government payrolls and the membership of the military organizations, we do question the method of getting at the purported object of their work—the ferreting out of disloyal employees. It is not fair to suppose that heads of departments want men about them who would turn them over to the enemy if the opportunity offered, and if reporting for duty on or before Monday morning, January 7th, verifies a man's loyalty, then the Cabinet officers and the Marshal are by all means the proper persons to make up a list of who reported for duty and who is deserving of a continued position under the Government. The military organizations ought to give Government officials the credit of knowing what they are about, and we would suggest that the best method of getting at the matter so that no injustice should be done would have been to determine beyond the shadow of a doubt who was loyal and who was not, and then go ahead with the weeding process. There are men, whose names appear on the list made Saturday night, who reported for duty early Monday morning. Possibly, they were not given arms because there were not enough guns to go around, or because, as some claim, the officials "had reasons." Simply calling a man, who reported at the police station or the Executive Building Monday morning but was not put on duty, "a bloody Royalist," is not sufficient cause for the dismissal of a Government employee. If the officials "had reasons," they would doubtless have said so; if there were not enough guns to arm the men, most certainly they are not to be blamed for that.

It is perfectly proper to have the matter investigated, if the public see fit, but it is good policy to pursue methods free from the probable criticisms of disinterested parties with whom it is desirable the country should remain on friendly terms.

LET US BE SATISFIED.

The final sentences, passed on Saturday, upon those in revolt against the Republic, closes another chapter of these times. In refraining from enforcing the death penalty, the Government has acted wisely, under all of the circumstances. It was not a question of right or wrong only which was involved, of sufficient or insufficient punishment, but it involved a most serious question of policy, of maintaining ourselves here, and retaining our moral strength abroad. On the whole, it was better to run some risk, through clemency to the rebels, than peril our friendly relations with leading men in the States.

At the same time, it does not at all follow, that capital punishment would have secured for us, what we expect it would. There is little analogy between private and political crimes. The motives which lie behind revolutions, are usually of a stronger and higher character than the motives which lead to simple murder. Men actuated by a sense of patriotic justice, will take great risks. Even those who revolt from selfish motives are influenced not so much by a fear of punishment, as by the hope of success. If another revolt be proposed here, the men who are asked to join in it will consent to it, if they believe it will succeed. In the South American States, revolutionists are shot at once. It has little effect. Another set of them soon arise, and take their chances.

The safeguards of the country are in weeding out troublesome men, seditious talking men and adventurers, and also, in convincing the turbulent that revolts cannot succeed.

The future here is made secure, vastly more by the acts of the military forces, during the trials following the uprising, than by the punishment. It convinced many, who were in doubt about the powers of the Republic, that it was all sufficient for itself.

Extended investigation shows this extraordinary and curious fact, that the leaders of the revolt believed that the Citizens' Guard would not appear. It did, however, and put at rest that question. There is more to be said, hereafter, on this point. The natives and some of the royalists believed, devoutly, that the "missionaries" were cowards. They have gone to school and learned a more wholesome lesson, perhaps, than one to be spelled out of the spectacle of men hanging on a gibbet.

Let us be contented with the action of the Government. It was burdened with the responsibility, and even if there has been some error in its judgment, this is no time for filling the political air with conflicting opinions about its acts.

Timely Topics

February 15, 1895.

The press, voicing the sentiments of the theatre-going people, is crying for a new opera house, now that the old one that stood idle month in and month out, is gone they want a place of amusement. There's nothing like being deprived of a thing to make people feel they must have it. But where is the money to come from? The people here who have money to spare are not those who build theatres or anything else through public spiritedness, there must be in sight some return for the investment and none can be seen in the theatre project. It is pretty well understood that the old opera house was an expense of about two thousand dollars a year to its owners with an offset of about $1500 per year for rentals. Not much money in the investment is there? Americans will tell you that there is not a city the size of Honolulu anywhere in the West but what has its opera house and two or three electric railway lines, but if you ask who built them you will learn that it was through the energy and enterprise of men who had corner lots and outside property for sale.

Honolulu is one place on the map that has not had, and probably never will have, a real estate boom; its "just a stiddy growth." An opera house will not bring any better returns in Honolulu than would an ice factory at the North Pole and the people who want one built know it. How many people are there in Honolulu that would subscribe a thousand dollars each toward building one? Not a dozen outside the editors of the newspapers; but show an investment that will bring them a guaranteed return of 25 per cent. and they would tumble over each other to put their names down on the subscription list.

If you are thinking about painting your house you can do nothing better than examine our cards showing colors of Hendry's Ready Mixed Paints. You can find in the assortment, just what you need for either inside or outside work, and you can get more satisfactory results than if you bought white lead and oil and mixed your own colors. The pigment in our mixed paints is the best that can be found anywhere; the lead is just lead, and the zinc is pure zinc. You get no whitening and oil in our compounds. These mixed paints will stand the wear and tear of this climate better than any other paint manufactured. We simply ask you to try them and see that our statements regarding the quality of the paint are not exaggerated.

Solid silverware is almost as much in demand as it was Christmas time—it is useful twelve months in the year and just as acceptable to your wife as it was two months ago. Our stock is kept filled up at all times so that we can supply any demand made upon us.

The Haviland China we show you is rather better than anything we have ever shown before; the designs are different and probably more inviting to persons who have a penchant for fine China. We will be pleased to furnish prices on application.

VALUE OF BALL BEARING.

An experiment with ball bearings was recently made in Canada. A street-car fitted with ball bearings was drawn a distance of several hundred feet by men pulling on the three strands of ordinary sewing thread. A carriage manufacturer put another style of ball bearings on the axles of a coach ordinarily pulled by four horses. A trained dog was hitched to the pole, and he drew the coach around the yard with little effort. —(Daily Bulletin.
